[Redacted]

1. No flying was done by elements of the 24th Air Army on 9 December 1950, presumably as a result of adverse weather conditions. The only units observed were a fighter regiment at Brandenburg and a fighter division headquarters at Peenemünde.
2. There was no flying on Sunday, 10 December, and very little on 11 December, when the weather was again unfavorable. Three ground-attack units were observed taking off and landing at Jüterbog; these engaged in bombing practice.

This document is hereby regraded to CONFIDENTIAL in accordance with the letter of 16 October 1978 from the Director of Central Intelligence to the Archivist of the United States.
